CHICAGO, November 18, 2008 – Prime Advantage, the leading buying consortium for industrial manufacturers, announced that it received the Support Supplier of the Year award from Enodis Plc. Enodis, a longtime global leader in the design and manufacture of commercial food and beverage equipment, has been a member of Prime Advantage since 2002.

“Enodis is pleased to announce that Prime Advantage was selected as the 2008 Services Supplier of the Year,” said Tom Tetlow, vice president of purchasing, Enodis. “Prime Advantage has been instrumental in finding key raw material, components, and service suppliers for Enodis, and we are continually introduced to suppliers with new technologies within the group.”

The Support Supplier of the Year award recognizes sources that are vital to Enodis' supply chain. Through its membership with Prime Advantage, Enodis has developed a variety of new sourcing relationships that have positively impacted its product line while realizing significant rebates that continue to grow.

Louise O'Sullivan, president and CEO of Prime Advantage, accepted the award during a ceremony at Enodis' U.S. headquarters in Florida.

"Prime Advantage is proud to accept this award from Enodis," said O'Sullivan. "It is a testament to our dedication to developing relationships for our members that bring new technological developments, quality materials, components and services, a reduced vendor base and improved supply networks."
